ABSTRACT

This fifth edition of the Native Education Directory presents a rich array of activity in Indian country: organizing, leading, researching, administering, governing, publishing, broadcasting, and educating. Section 1, national and international nongovernment organizations, is broken down into four subsections covering advocacy, networking, and reform; research, development, technical assistance, and training; funding and sponsorship; and youth leadership, mentoring, and service. Section 2, federal programs, consists of 8 subsections; one each for the Departments of Education, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, and Labor; Congress; the National Science Foundation; and the Smithsonian Institution. Section 3 covers media, periodicals, publishers, and producers of other useful directories. Section 4 presents state and territorial government and nongovernment organizations. Section 5 covers colleges and universities offering Native studies, Native language instruction, supportive services, or scholarships for Native students. In all sections, each entry lists contact information, including address, contact person, phone, fax, e-mail, and Web site (when available); the area served; and a short program description. Preface

This is the fifth edition of the Native Education Directory. For this edition, we have followed the pattern established with our 1997 edition, so if you had a copy of it, this one will look like familiar terrain to you. This edition of the directory also signifies a first-ever partnership with the National Indian Education Association (NIEA). We look forward to an ongoing relationship with NIEA in publishing this and other American Indian and Alaska Native materials.

We have published what people have told us about their organizations. We have no way of checking the accuracy of the information they have provided about themselves, so nothing in this directory should be read as an endorsement by the Clearinghouse or by the National Indian Education Association. The contents reflect a rich array of activity in Indian Country: organizing, leading, researching, administering, governing, publishing, broadcasting, and educating.

We would like to thank all of those who responded to our letters, faxes, e-mail requests, and telephone calls. We also owe thanks to Gaytha Jones, Velma Mitchell, Cindy Dawson, Marilyn Slack, Dawn Pauley, Robert Hagerman, Susan Voelkel, and Carolyn Luzader for various sorts of help in preparing the manuscript for publication.

An online version of the directory will be maintained and updated as we hear from people about changes at their organizations. You can access the online directory at the ERIC/CRESS Web site (<http://www.ael.org/eric/ned/index.htm>). If you are associated with a group that you think should be included in the online directory or the next print edition, please visit the Web site, where you will find a link to an online entry request form. –PCH

Opened in 1999, the Center has become Alaska's premier interactive cultural destination by offering many ways to experience Alaska's Native cultures for young and old alike. Diverse people are able to gather and expand their understanding of one another, enhancing self-esteem among Native people, and encouraging exploration of cross-cultural communication exchanges with non-Natives. The Center represents five groupings of the 11 distinct Alaska Native culture: Athabascan; Yup'ik/Cup'ik; Inupiaq and St. Lawrence Island Yupik; Aleut and Alutiiq; Eyak, Tlingit, Haida, and Tsimshian.
